GERMANS TRENCHE SERIOUSLY WOUNDED AT SEVERAL POINTS

French Official Report States That Violent Artillery Fire Marked Sunday Fighting in Argonne District

GERMANS TAKE ANOTHER TOWN FROM THE RUSSIANS

Grondo Is Only Fortified Position Russians Hold Near German Border

Teutons Mass Troops Near Rumania

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Grondo, last of the great fortresses in Poland held by the Russians, now seems to be the objective of a German drive. Today reports the capture by storm of the town of Lipsk, about twenty miles to the west of the fortress.

General von Eichhorn has defeated the Russians in a battle east of the town, northeast of the fortress of Oltza, recently taken by the Germans, capturing 1,500 prisoners and seven cannons, the German official statement announces. The defeat by Field Marshal von Mackensen's army of Russian forces which made a stand south of Kobrin while retreating in the marshy districts east of Brest-Litovsk is reported.

German trenches at several points in the Argonne region were seriously wounded late on Sunday by the explosion of mines and the pounding of French artillery, according to today's official report from Paris.

The sinking of the British steamer Str. William Stephenson of New Castle, a 500-ton vessel, presumably after having been torpedoed by a German submarine, is reported from London.

The advent of night brought relative quiet to this region, as well as on the rest of the front.

Connally's Auto Was Not Stolen; 'Twas a Mistake

The stolen Ford of Joe Brown Connally was sought high and low Saturday night by city and county police, and when it was finally found and the occupants, a man and his wife, had explained and protested and telephoned and talked, why it was found that the automobile was not stolen at all.

The "theft" of the car was reported from in front of the Marlboro apartments, corner Pine and Peabody streets. Mr. Connally had given it to J. G. Coutts to use while the latter, who is superintendent for Wells Brothers, was in charge of the erection of the Connally building, Mr. Coutts left it in front of the apartment about 8 o'clock and when he came out it was gone.

Demands Ransom For Survivors of Missing Steamer

(By Associated Press.)
NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—United Fruit company officials here today awaited a report either by wireless or direct from the captain of the steamer Suriname, concerning the results of the missing of the vessel.

Investigation of statements by an anonymous letter writer that Captain McLearn, two members of the crew and two passengers of the missing steamer, Marjorie had been rescued and were being held for ransom on Columbian island, off the Yucatan coast. The Suriname was due to arrive here late today, but it was thought the wrecked steamer's company officials by wireless as to the results of her efforts to verify the kidnapping story.

The United Fruit company stated today they were inclined to consider as a "fake" the unsigned letter which was dated "on board S. S. Pinal, August 23," and which told of the alleged kidnapping of survivors from the Marjorie. The letter stated that the five persons taken from the liner would be released when the company "pays our price," but the amount of ransom demanded was not mentioned. Statements of the company's information as to the location of the Marjorie when she was wrecked were two years old.

Hard Luck Kept Champion Dexter Out of Tourney

On Eighteenth Green He Forgot and Carelessly Knocked Ball Into Cup Instead of Putting It In

Atlanta who have been following the returns from Detroit, where the national amateur championship is in progress, have been wondering why the name of one Charlie Dexter did not appear among those who qualified.

Charlie Dexter, you know, was the tall young man from Dallas, Tex., who defeated Nelson Whitney in the final at East Lake a month ago, thereby winning the southern championship, and he was Dexter's best bet for the national title.

That it is not a gross oversight to be thoughtless in this game was illustrated on the home turf, when Charlie Dexter, a Dallas golfer, after missing a wee putt, carelessly knocked the ball in the cup. He picked it out and put it in properly, but the damage had been done, and disqualification automatically resulted. It was hard luck for Dexter had a 78.

The seventy-two golfers who qualified at Detroit, only sixteen had scores as good as 79.

R. D. Conacher Is Drowned at New York City

THE LASS THAT LOVED A SAILOR

At the age of 19, the daughter of a sailor, she was drowned in the New York City harbor. The story is a tragedy of love and loss.

R. D. Conacher, a graduate of the Georgia School of Technology in the class of 1912, was drowned Saturday while bathing in the ocean off Staten Island. His body was recovered Monday morning.

News of the tragedy reached New York authorities to F. P. Gibbs, secretary of Malta Lodge, 414, F. & M. Mr. Conacher was a member in this Atlanta lodge of Malta.

Mr. Gibbs immediately notified Mr. Conacher's guardian, Miss Margaret Truham, of Atlanta, and if recovery of the body will be sent to Augusta for interment.

Mr. Conacher left no immediate relatives. He was originally from Augusta and graduated from the Richmond Academy in 1913. He then entered Tech in 1913, and made many friends in Atlanta while attending that institution. He left Atlanta soon after his graduation and has been doing engineering work at different places over the country. Recently he has been connected with Dougherty & Co., civil engineers, of New York City.

According to the telegram to Mr. Gibbs he was drowned about 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT DIPLOMATIC VICTORY IS WON BY WILSON

Goods Contracted for by American Importers in Germany and Austria May Pass Blockade Unmolested

CARGOES WORTH MILLIONS OF DOLLARS ARE INVOLVED

Christmas Trade Was Seriously Threatened by Failure to Obtain Goods Already Contracted for and Which Were Held

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Concessions in the enforcement against American commerce of the British order in council were announced today as a result of informal negotiations just completed by the foreign trade advisers of the state department.

The British ambassador, Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, assured the trade advisers that the British order in council cases where the British orders have caused undue hardship to American commerce will receive special consideration.

The ambassador called at the state department personally to explain to the extent of the British concessions, which are especially intended to meet the growing complaint of American importers that their Christmas trade is threatened by failure to obtain goods made in Germany and Austria for which they had contracted.

Generally speaking, it is the intention of the British government to permit the passage through blockade lines of goods for which the American importers have entered into contract with German and Austrian firms. Goods have accumulated at Rotterdam and await transportation to the United States. It is believed that it will be sufficient to show that they were regularly contracted for and that the American importers are responsible for them and their title rests with them. Death to Allies, Is German War Cry in Trenches

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press.) Of the numerous "war newspapers" that have made their appearance in the trenches, the most important on the various battle fronts, has been the "L'Esprit de la Guerre," published in Lille, France, the headquarters of the French army. The paper is a daily, and is the property of the French army. It is a daily, and is the property of the French army. It is a daily, and is the property of the French army.

After forty weeks of publication the editors have selected the best from their files and have put it into book form.

The little book is jammed with poetry and prose, with excellent illustrations and sketches and excellent photographs, all of which have appeared in the "L'Esprit de la Guerre."

One characteristic article is "The Ten Commandments of the War," by Dr. Karl Wolff, as follows:

"Thou shalt not take the name of thy lord in vain, neither in rough jest nor in any other way, but thou shalt use it with reverence and awe, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt have no other thought but of duty and of God. For if thou dost not, thou wilt be a coward and a traitor, and thou wilt be a disgrace to thy country and to thy race."

"Thou shalt be true and loyal to thy country and to thy race, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt be brave and courageous, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt be kind and merciful to thy fellow men, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt be honest and truthful, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt be clean and pure, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

"Thou shalt be strong and healthy, and thou shalt be ever ready to die for it."

Germany to Back Views of Chancellor on Arabic

BERLIN, (London.)—It is understood today that Germany's official position on the Arabic question has been decided upon and that it is in line with the recent conciliatory statement of the chancellor, Admiral von Tirpitz and other participants in the conference with the German emperor at his headquarters on the eastern front.

No official statement has been made regarding the German decision, but there seems good ground for the belief that the government has adopted the viewpoint here by the chancellor.

Gerard Thro No Light on Arabic Case

(By Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—One dispatch from London today stated that Gerard Thro no light on the Arabic case. Al-though the dispatch was not official, it was inferred that the German government did not yet have the report of the submarine commander and was not ready to make its explanation.

Good Advice, and Timely.

Nearly two weeks ago The Journal said editorially:

"As a matter of practical wisdom and in justice to the great interests involved, Council should reconsider its recent act ordering a municipal bond election for September the thirtieth next. We urge this course not because we are opposed to bonds or unmindful of the vital needs they are intended to serve, but because we are convinced that in present circumstances the proposed issue would be defeated and thereby complicate the very problems it is designed to solve."

It is gratifying to learn that this same conclusion has been reached by a committee of the heads of the various municipal departments, the majority of whom now advise that the proposed bond election be deferred to a more propitious season. This does not mean that Atlanta's need of a bond issue for the improvement of Grady hospital, schools, sewers, waterworks and other fields of public concern should be minimized or forgotten. It simply means that we should not hazard the defeat of bonds and expose these great needs to indefinite neglect. It is to be hoped that Council will concur in the judgment of the departmental committee.

Local Taxation for Schools.

The Alabama Legislature has rendered substantial service to the cause of rural education by submitting to the voters a constitutional amendment that will authorize the people of each county and district to levy a special tax for the establishment and maintenance of public schools. There seems to be no doubt that the amendment will be ratified at the polls.

One of the great needs of common school education in the South is the raising of more money for such purposes through local taxation. One dollar applied to schools by the people of a particular county or district does more good than two dollars appropriated from the State treasury; for, the dollar raised locally carries with it the interest and enthusiasm and vigilance of the community for which it is spent. Where a people's treasure is, there will their hearts be.

Seven years ago there were in Georgia only four counties that had county-wide local taxation for schools. Today forty counties have such taxation. The result has been a strengthening of the school system, particularly in those progressive counties.

It's a long, long way to Petrograd.

Protect Georgia's Oyster Beds.

The Savannah News calls timely attention to the need of better safeguards for the fish and oyster industries of Georgia. The State's wealth from this source could be doubled easily and quickly, says the News, if there were adequate plans for development, supported by adequate laws for protection. "Virginia and Maryland have devised a system, backed by legislation, for conserving their oyster beds, and found that it has paid well; there is no reason why Georgia cannot do as they have done."

The game law enacted a few years ago has proved very serviceable as far as it goes, but evidently it falls short of much that is needed. Particularly is this true of fish and oyster resources. Millions of potential wealth are being wasted, in some instances destroyed, for the lack of well-considered and well-enforced legislation. It is to be hoped that at the next regular session of the General Assembly this important matter will be dealt with; and meanwhile those who appreciate the needs of the situation should be preparing a proper bill and developing sentiment in its support.

We agree with our vice president that when foreigners come to America to live they should quit being press agents for the old countries.

No danger of breaking the solid south when we can clothe the world, furnish it with high explosives, and raise our own food at home.

A Disappointing Experiment.

Difficult though it is to make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, that is nothing as compared with the task of making a sow's ear out of a silk purse. To change the smooth, snug texture of a four-thousand-year-old monarchy into the blood and shine of a republic would seem a task impossible in nature. It is not surprising to hear that China contemplates a return to monarchical government.

The fall of the Manchu dynasty in February, 1912, was the occasion of divers bright prophecies for the future of that ancient empire. The young Chinese, thousands of whom were traveled and schooled in Europe and America, foresaw complete and enduring triumph for the revolution to which they had dedicated their souls. We were reminded that for years past China had been in ferment, intellectually, socially and politically, and that her people were to be indeed the masters of their government. So ran the dream, but the gray fact remained that of the three hundred and twenty-five million people thus called to self government the great mass was oblivious alike to the opportunity and the obligation.

A republic in name was set up. The Dowager Empress and the child Emperor were sequestered at Peking, and Yuan Shih Kai, the shrewdest courtier of the land and a trusted friend of the dynasty, was made President. It was fortunate, perhaps, for the material interests of the Chinese that so conservative a leader as Yuan Shih Kai was chosen for the experiment. He has held things together more successfully than a radical could have done. But skillfully and steadily he has tightened the reins of personal power, and now we hear that he is thinking of becoming a monarch.

If his thought is given shape, there will be revolutions, but it is doubtful that there will be much ado outside the southern provinces. The shadowy millions will go their way mildly interested, taking life as it comes, content with destiny.

All the same, we want to see Germany's pledge sealed, signed and delivered.

Aeroplane Against Submarine.

It has been observed frequently that there is no effectual means of fighting the submarine. Within its own sphere of operations this undersea warrior has the advantage over the greatest vessels and is comparatively secure against attacks from craft of its kind. True, if its periscope is exposed to the enemy's fire, a single shot may prove fatal, as was demonstrated in the earlier months of the war when a British cruiser sank a German submarine at great range. Evidently, too, a number of submarines have been destroyed one way or another. Still, no dependable defense against them has been devised, as far as the world is informed.

Particular interest, therefore, attaches to the announcement from London that a German submarine has been blown to pieces off the French coast by a bomb dropped from an aeroplane. The New York Herald's account of the incident says that in smooth water submarines can frequently be detected by an aeroplane at a depth of one hundred feet, "and on the surface or awash, their location is an easy task for the air craft."

"Bismarck, referring to the difficulty of a decisive war between Russia and England," the Herald adds, "remarked that it would be like a battle between an elephant and a whale. The aeroplane and the submarine now seem to be able to carry out the role of the fishhawk and the fish."

Evidently, aeroplanes can be of great service as a patrol to vessels against which submarine attacks are expected, but a very numerous fleet of aeroplanes would be required to provide against all contingencies. It remains for science to contrive an adequate counter weapon, unless American science already has done so in secret for our navy.

Some surprise is being expressed in literary and other circles over Henry James becoming a British subject; but then you could hardly expect that Henry would line up with Germany.

Editorial Echoes

In calling this an "old man" war Jane Addams popularized in this country an idea which had been fermenting in England for some time, and seems now to be getting new vogue, especially in radical groups of young intellectuals. On the military side it can be probably an unprecedented success story, can a war be named in which the high commanders were as a rule so old? The reason no doubt is to be found in the enormous development of the military machine during a prolonged peace. Seniority tempered by selection had put in high command enough men of competence to insure the survival of many sturdy veterans even when the incompetents had been weeded out. The German army in 1870 was notable for its grand old men, including Moltke and King William himself, and the better the organization in peace perhaps the greater is the probability that competent men of long experience will be in high command when war comes—Springfield Republican.

Princeton's plan of a compulsory course in life saving in the water is heartily to be commended. It does not follow that if a man swims well he knows how to save another person who needs help, although this seems to be the general impression. Not one swimmer in twenty is familiar with the tactics that should be used. The expert swimmer not infrequently drowns in the grip of the person he tries to save. Hereafter every Princeton graduate is to be grounded and practised in the means of saving life in the water and resuscitating the apparently drowned. Every large school and college in the country should follow this excellent example.—New York Sun.

Study the Great.

BY H. ADDINGTON BRUCE.

THE reading of any good book is a real aid to self-education. But there is one type of book—the biography—which I particularly recommend to those who wish to make as much of their lives as possible.

The special helpfulness of a good biography rests in the fact that it brings out concretely the traits and qualities which count for most in the achieving of success.

It is a law of every-day observation as well as of psychological research that principles of conduct tend to be accepted and acted upon in proportion as they are presented concretely to the mind.

This is why, in the formation of character in early life, there is nothing quite so influential as parental example.

The parent may exhort and instruct as he will. But it is his personal philosophy of life, as demonstrated by his life, which will most strongly and lastingly influence the development of his child's character. The child invariably reacts more readily to the influence of the abstract doctrine.

If the parent's words and acts are harmonious, so much the better for the child's mental and moral growth. If they do not harmonize, so much the worse for the child.

What is true of childhood is true of all ages of life. Always it is the concrete example of other people that counts most strongly for good or for ill. If, as is often the case, we are intimately associated with persons whose example does not make for our good, it is our duty to form new associations. We can do this by making new friendships, and by bringing into our lives, through their biographies, the influence of the example set by the best men and women of other days.

In a biography worthy of the name it is no mere dummy, no lay figure, that presents itself from the printed page. It is a human being like ourselves—vibrant with life, full of hopes and ambitions. Also, if the biographer be skillful, it is a human being who lets us see exactly how he overcame obstacles, banished doubt and realized the goal of his dreams.

To be sure, many biographies are badly written. They are overlaid with irrelevant and prosy details, which hide rather than reveal the man with whom they deal. Such books are like indigestible food, and it is wise to avoid them.

But there are plenty of biographies which bring us into direct contact with the lives of great men in the flesh. These are the biographies you should read. And the reading of them may mark a turning point in your life.

The librarian of your public library will gladly help you to make a wise choice. Read the books thus recommended. Having read them, select those which have most powerfully appealed to you, and then buy copies of them to keep in your home.

You will find them friends truly worth having—friends to whom you can always turn when weary and discouraged, and to whom you will unfailingly spur you to renewed and more successful effort.

The Nation Speaks.

Children of Liberty, awake!
In ordered ranks your places take!
Where Freedom's sons have blazed the trail,
Shall you, their lead descendants, fail?
To hold in time the ideal path of life,
That is their heritage secure?
Against the hour you would know how,
Learn ye to serve me—learn it now!

You, who from forms of bondage freed,
Have sought and found the refuge here
Where reap the fruit of bitter tears
And patriot blood of former years,
Learn ye the most that I can give,
Learning how God meant man to live—
You promised fealty, your vow
Was pledged to me, I need you now!

I need you now, my sons! Why wait
Till an invader storms the gate?
Your desperate resistance then
Might not avail. A host of men
Untrained, undisciplined, are less,
In time of peril and distress,
Than is one that mightily would be,
Versed in the arts of soldiery.

On these, my children! So secure,
So confident, so over-secure,
While Europe dies, with warning writ
In blood across the face of it!
Valor doubt not, warm your hearts—
Discretion is the better part!
Lest to the scourge your neck must bow,
Be ye prepared!—I need you now!

—Beatrice Barry, in the New York Times.

The Searchlight.

The rarest and most costly vessels in the world are the antique Chinese bronzes, some of which are known to be nearly 3,000 years old. They are almost priceless, not only because of their great age, but also for their exquisite workmanship. The decorations include lines of gold as fine as human hair.

While lovers of antiquities of different nations have been collecting these bronzes for many years, and trying to get as good a collection as possible, the Chinese, who are the original owners, have not been doing so. It is only recently that an official and authentic description in English of the different varieties in existence has been compiled. Lang Tung-shu, a noted Chinese archaeologist in his own position, wrote such a description in 1917. It has been translated into English and was published a few weeks ago by the Smithsonian Institution.

Lang Tung-shu divides the real antiques into three classes representing the dynasties of Hsia, existing from 2205 B. C. to 1766 B. C., of Shang, from 1766 B. C. to 1122 B. C., and of Chow, from 1122 B. C. to 221 B. C. Bronzes produced at a later period than this are regarded as modern by the Chinamen, whose reverence for "antique" to anything created within 2,000 years.

Quips and Quiddities

The young man had come for the all-important task of "seeing father," and he was equal to the occasion. Mr. Grottox—"My daughters, young man, are both very nice girls."

Suitor—"The fact that I am asking for the smaller one proves at any rate that I am not mercenary."

Serkeant Fitz believed in handing his men firmly. Pausing before one recruit he eyed him sternly.

"Now, then, pull yourself together," he barked harshly, "you're standing with your feet on the ground, not on your right, your buttons are dirty and you're holding your rifle like a hay fork. Let's see if you can march right about face!"

The recruit stood stock still and heaved a sigh of relief.

"Thank goodness," he said, with resignation, "I'm right about something anyway."

Two women were chatting about different things when one suddenly turned to the other.

"When do you think the war will be over, Mrs. Love?"

In a fortnight," was the prompt reply, "as my husband has joined the army and he never kept a job longer than a fortnight."

There was recently held into an Alabama court a little Irishman to whom the thing was a new experience. But he was unabashed and wore an air of a man determined not to "get the worst of it."

"Prisoner at the bar," called out the clerk, "do you wish to challenge any of the jury?"

The clerk looked the men in the box over very carefully.

"Well, I tell you," he finally replied, "I'm not exactly in train; but I think O'Neil could pull off a round or two with that fat old boy in 'em corner."

DEPARTMENT STORE EDUCATION.

BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

THE department store is fast becoming a regular organized educational institution. Aside from its indirect educational influence in the improvement of the standards of living, it is in many cases, conducting classes of different grades. It hires trained teachers to give instructions to the younger employees in the same subjects and after the same methods used in the public schools of the city. In addition to the regular subjects, special lessons on salesmanship and other commercial vocations are given by methods harmonious with the daily work of the store.

A few weeks ago a department store in Youngstown, Ohio, tendered an elaborate reception to a young woman from Boston who had been engaged to open a store school in September. She is employing her summer in becoming acquainted with the store methods and the younger employees who are to be her pupils that she may arrange a schedule of highest efficiency to begin next month. In large bright rooms on the second floor has been set aside for a main school room. It has three small classrooms adjoining. The firm provides suitable furniture and equipment, including the requisite text books and a well selected reference library.

In a number of cities, the stores will not accept the services of a boy or girl in any capacity, who has not completed the full eighth grade work, except upon the condition that they attend the store school. Failure to make proper use of the advantages provided may form grounds for dismissal. Each child is given a certain number of hours per week for class work, the classes alternating with each other in a way which will not interfere with the store work.

In stores in which an eight o'clock opening is still vogue, the classes of the public school begin at that hour, the time when they can be best spared from their regular work. The crowded trade conditions of the afternoon require that the store employees must be ready to begin their work at the store.

The employees in the shipping, mail order and stenographic departments may receive their instructions in the afternoon, since their busiest times are in the early part of the day.

By a hearty co-operation between the heads of the departments and the store employees, it is possible to arrange a schedule by which every employee in need of, or desiring more education may be given a certain amount of time to acquire it. The increased efficiency secured has been found to more than compensate for the financial outlay of the firm.

The compulsory education law fixes the age limit before which no child may leave school. It has failed to fix the educational standard, so department stores are beginning to do that. Where a child is required to attend high school and high school work placed within easy reach, even after the wage earning period has begun, the store employees of today cannot fail to secure a higher education than was possible ten years ago.

The most recent development of the store school is the store school for the public school. Here in Italy people in number of Boston stores, both girls and boys who desire to attend certain classes in public school are permitted to do so and suffer no loss of wages for the time they are in school. The girls are required to certify to their attendance and even attempted cases of truancy are unknown. The teachers co-operate with the store employees in this plan, and the store at the hours in which it is most convenient for the store to have the students away from work.

In Los Angeles, the co-operation between the larger stores and the commercial high school is very close. Salesmanship is taught in the high school by moving pictures taken in the stores and lectures given by the heads of different store departments. In addition to this, pupils of the high school are permitted to come into the store at certain hours for demonstrations of the different branches of selling, billing and classifying of goods.

The children who have had to go to work in the stores before they were able to enter high school receive instruction in the store by regular teachers. It is expected that arrangements can be made for the future by which these employees, through the combined facilities of the store school and the public high school may be able to attain high school diplomas by spending a year or two longer than would have been required, if they had been able to give their full time to study.

The Mississippi College of Agriculture will establish a new course in kindred work this fall, intended to prepare young people for executive work in the department stores of small towns. It will be conducted by trained business men who will give the students a practical knowledge of the details of store efficiency. The course is to be four years in length. Its completion will give the degree Bachelor of Business Science. It is an interesting innovation for an agricultural institution, but it is intended to meet the increasing vocational needs of the state.

Another evidence of the growing co-operation between the store and the public school system was the invitation extended last month by the Indiana Retail Dry Goods Association to the Indiana Teachers of the state to attend the educational meeting of the state convention in Indianapolis. This was presided over by Mrs. Lucinda Price, of the Woman's Educational and Industrial Union of Boston, who described the vocational opportunities of the store and its educational advantages. More than eighty teachers were in attendance and took part in the discussion which followed.

The co-operation with the public school is the latest development of store education, and it is the most important. In hundreds of stores throughout the country, such co-operation has not yet been established and the firms, at their own expense, sometimes with scant encouragement from the public school, are making the most of the educational advantages within reach of every employee who will grasp them. These advantages may include many special subjects.

A young girl working in the adding department of such a store had continual trouble with her accounts. Her figures would not come right, although she was conscientious and painstaking. The manager of the department noticed that she occasionally made attractive little sketches or ornamental letters on blank paper. He brought these to the attention of the firm. The girl was transferred to the sign department where she was permitted to make letters upon signs calling attention to special sales. A drawing teacher was provided for her and she soon was progressing. Now, after five years, she is a designer, drawing a salary of a hundred dollars a week. All her education has been secured through the store, and the firm of the store which she entered when she was fifteen years of age.

The numerous departments of well organized stores afford opportunities in almost every class of work. An ambitious boy or girl should be able to find a specialty best suited to individual talent. If a calling is desired which seems to be outside of the store, a boy has proved himself deserving, any progressive firm is likely to make special provision by which he may acquire the necessary knowledge without being dependent wholly upon the store.

ROME'S DULL IN WAR

BY HERBERT COREY.

ROME, July 25.—Life in the Italian wartime is a losing struggle against ennui. One yawns one yawn after another. There is not even the poor pleasure of listening to rumors which you know in your heart are untrue, but which at least may be repeated. It is a way of making conversation. Conversation is the only way of killing time. Here in Italy people do not repeat rumors about the war, unless the rumors are pleasant ones. If you wish to repeat unpleasant rumors, you must first invent a plausible excuse to catch you. Here is a story worth telling because every one in Rome has now told it to every one else in Rome. It isn't at all a funny story. It just illustrates the situation.

"When you were a child," said the old man, "you were a boy named a creditor. The man who owed the money said that he did not know at all when he could find 1,400 lire. The war had muddled up his finances."

"But you must pay me," said the creditor. "I am here and you are not. People owe me 50,000 lire and I can't get a centesimo."

"Officer," said the debtor, beckoning to a gendarme, "arrest this man. He is spreading alarming rumors about the war, and he is not to make invention of the war. That is a violation of the proclamation, too."

"Take him along," demanded the creditor. "He has been spreading rumors about the war. That is a violation of the proclamation, too."

Partly because of the proclamation and partly because no one knows anything about the war and the result is so much to make invention of the war, rumors are heard. Not that the weather is really hot, from an American point of view. The rumors of the Italian summer were invented by people who prefer to sleep in the middle of the day. Baked and roasted outside foods are full of directions to the tourist to the best manner of trying to escape heat prostration.

is at Milan. One doesn't get so much news there, perhaps, but it is nearer the border and the smuggling is easier.

People here do all their work in the forenoon and spend the rest of the day in recreation and rest. The business houses all close during the middle of the day. Romans sit about in their little cafes and drink drinks with scant encouragement from the public school, and smoke cigarettes that are as fragrant as a fire in a weed patch. The lower down in the lower scale of life the more entertainment you get during this period.

The flea hitherto referred to is chiefly patronized by the poor. It is a place where you can get a time of rest and relaxation. It is a place where you can get a time of rest and relaxation. It is a place where you can get a time of rest and relaxation.

There are fewer motor cars on the streets of course, thanks to the commandeering of cars by the government and the restrictions as to the use of gasoline. One can find a car five miles from the city, but it is not to be known by their gray paint and high speed. No military chauffeur ever drives on anything short of the high, but a corner more than two wheels. These facts considerably mitigate my grief when I read, as I frequently do, that this "promising young officer" or that is being dug out from beneath the ruins of the city. The British army is not the only one that has a past of "flappers," either, if one may judge by the contents of some of the military diary here. It is an odd mechanical fact that the more flappers the flappers the higher the speed. To make up for the shortage of motor cars there is a corps of horse cabs. It is merely, of course, that the regular supply of cabs has less work to do because of the elimination of the tourist. The government has commandeered the motor cars of the city.

TROOPS GUARD NEGRO FROM ILLINOIS MOB

Three Companies Needed to Protect Alleged Slayer of Woman From Lynching

(By Associated Press.)
MURPHYSBORO, Ill., Aug. 29.—As a result of threats of lynching made against Joe Deberry, a negro charged with the murder of Mrs. James Martin, three companies of the Illinois state militia stood guard around the jail and court house here today, the day set for the opening of Deberry's trial. A mob of several persons who surrounded the courthouse, Ill. jail last night intent on lynching the negro, was followed when he was smuggled the negro, out of the jail and hurried him here in an automobile under escort of state troops.

Deberry is alleged to have confessed to the murder of Mrs. Martin, who was the wife of an attorney. He was a servant in the Martin home. Threats of lynching were made at the time of the murder and feeling was intensified when, several weeks later, Mrs. Martin's husband died of an illness induced by grief over the death of his wife.

Two Negroes Shot and Burned In Texas for Killing Officer

(By Associated Press.)
SULPHUR SPRINGS, Texas, Aug. 30.—In a fight with an armed negro near here late yesterday, Joe Richmond was shot and killed, and his brother, King Richmond, both of whom were seriously wounded; later the body of the dead negro was burned at the stake with the wounded negro, who was taken to Sulphur Springs.

The negroes had shot and killed the sheriff, Sheriff Nathan, who was probably fatally wounded Sheriff J. B. Butler.

When the posse arrived here with the negroes a large crowd had gathered and demands for the negroes were staged in the public square. Several influential men counseled that the bodies be not burned, saying there was nothing to be gained, since one negro was already dead and the other probably fatally wounded.

Finally, however, the mob removed the bodies and the negroes to Buford Park, in the outskirts of the city, where they were burned. There was little disorder and no one was hurt. The bodies were burned quietly dispersed.

The sheriff and his deputy had started to arrest King Richmond on a minor charge at a negro settlement south of here. Both negroes without warning opened fire, killing Pittman instantly and wounding Butler. The negroes beat Butler over the head and he is said to be in a precarious condition.

Within a short time hundreds of armed men were searching for the negroes. They were located in a wood in the afternoon and in the hands that ensued Joe Richmond was killed and his brother wounded.

Posse officers who joined in the search were far in the minority in the posse and unable to cope with the mob. It is estimated 1,500 men and boys trailed the negroes to their hiding place in the woods. The negroes brought July fire, fired several shots, but their fighting was of short duration, as the posse fired hundreds of shots into the cover.

It was learned that Sheriff Butler wounded one of the negroes at the time he and the deputy sought to arrest them at the settlement.

One thousand people had gathered in the public square here when the posse arrived with the dead and wounded negroes. Piles of cooler heads were being available and the mob carried out its work in Buford park with little ceremony.

Sheriff Butler's wounds consist of a broken arm, a shot through the top of his head and three fractures of the skull.

Posse Surrounds House Where Negro Is Barricaded (Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

ELBERTON, Ga., Aug. 29.—Sheriff Hays and posse have surrounded a house ten miles from Elberton where a negro has barricaded himself. The negro is said to have forged checks Saturday. He was pursued by officers and located near the Savannah river and escaped in a running sled. The negro was wounded. The posse kept up its hunt all last night and located the refugee today.

Mother's Hunger Drives Daughter To Try Suicide

There had been a time when Mrs. Rose Atkinson and her mother were rich. They had everything they could wish for. They were happy. But that was in another city and was many years ago.

Time brought changes, loss of money, sickness. They moved to Atlanta. Troubles came thick and fast. Their little home at 17 Savannah street the mother, and then, so that the daughter's heart ached as she went to work each day in the cotton mill.

Then she, too, fell ill. She could not walk, the rent was due, her mother was trying to die. The Grady hospital ambulance got there that night and she had swallowed bichloride of mercury tablets, and at the hospital Monday it was stated she will recover.

Lying on a cot in the emergency ward, Mrs. Atkinson told her story. "I would rather die than see my mother want for anything," she said.

CATTLE QUARANTINE TO BE RAISED IN 10 COUNTIES

Tick Eradication Campaign in Georgia Proving Highly Successful

Definite and highly satisfactory results are being obtained from the cattle tick eradication campaign conducted in Georgia, jointly by the state and federal agencies.

Dr. Peter F. Bahnen, state veterinarian, announced yesterday that the September 15 ten more Georgia counties would be released from the cattle tick quarantine and that these would be enabled to ship cattle to uninfected areas without the quarantine restrictions which have prevailed for some time.

The counties in which the quarantine is raised are Chatham, Gordon, Cherokee, Fulton, DeKalb, Jasper, Baldwin, Greene, Elbert and Richmond. Including these counties the number of counties in which the tick eradication work has been completed is thirty-nine, and Dr. Bahnen says that eight more counties will be released in the early spring.

During the past year, says Dr. Bahnen, hog and cattle raising in Georgia has increased surprisingly. He says that while in many north Georgia counties the average number of cattle is 5,000 head there are many counties in south Georgia, which have from 25,000 to 30,000 head.

OLD GEORGIA BONDS BEING "CHECKED IN"

Issue of 1885 Retired by Issue Recently Purchased by Asa Candler

Every member of the force in the office of State Treasurer W. W. Spear was busy Monday "checking in" the state bonds issued in July, 1885, and which were retired July 1 of this year by a refunding bond issue, purchased by Asa Candler, of Atlanta.

Every table and desk in the state treasurer's office was covered by these old bonds, which were being cancelled and packed for storage in the vaults. These bonds, which bore interest at the rate of four and one-half per cent, had been in almost every country of the world.

The largest number of the bonds had been redeemed in New York, but quite a number were retained by banks and some at the treasury department. All of the bonds were in a fine state of preservation, showing that they had been highly valued and well cared for. There were about $3,500,000 worth of these old bonds.

Atlanta Papers Thanked For Giving Aid To French

Calais Paper Editorially Calls Attention To Work For Relief Fund

Atlanta has broken into the news in France, but it's nothing about politics or the crackers or the sanitary department's new water wagon. This appears in a late issue of Le Petit Calaisien, the leading publication at Calais:

"In Atlanta three papers, 'The Constitution,' 'The Journal' and the Georgian, have done their part, a large part, in the work of sympathetic aid toward our country. Do they not merit a deep-felt thought from us, thanks from the bottom of our heart, until the time when we can prove the French are not ungrateful?"

The Calaisien appends an editorial note expressing similar sentiments—all of which is extremely gratifying to the three papers and to many Georgians who have generously answered appeals for aid voiced through the press by the Georgia executive committee for the relief of France and her allies.

SAYS MEXICAN WAR MORE NOISE THAN GORE

Birmingham Man Describes as "Pussy-Wants-a-Corner" Game

That the fighting in Mexico "between the Villa and Carranza is more of a 'pussy-wants-a-corner' character than real war," is the positive statement of L. Travis Downey, a Birmingham man, who is in Atlanta and has recently returned from Torreon, Mexico.

Mr. Downey says the reports of the number killed emanating from the war zone in Mexico are greatly overdrawn, but through fault of the newspaper correspondents. He says their telegrams are rigidly censored by the victorious element, the authorities of which insert in their stories any figures they see fit. One story which came from the war zone, Mr. Downey said, that told of the slaughter of more than 1,000 Carranzistas, should have stated that 40 or 50 were killed.

He says each side puts up a desperate bluff and tells a graphic story of one battle in which Villa wrested Torreon from the hands of the Carranzistas several weeks ago, the defenders being strongly fortified and ambushed when the Villa army made its assault on the city.

"There was fighting and yelling, shooting and running," said Mr. Downey. "The entire battle lasted less than an hour. No effort was made to keep the invading army out of the city. When the Carranzistas came coming they simply started shooting in no particular direction. In a few minutes the members of the two armies were intermingled, and the fighting stopped. As soon as social courtesies were exchanged, each army gathered to itself, the Carranzistas retiring and the Villistas holding the city. In a few days the Carranzistas would come back and take the city in the same manner."

"The men have no heart in the fighting. It is just a game they're playing and they bear nothing but good will to the winner."

THEIR SON

CHAD Carow was a disappointment to his parents, to use no stronger word. A poignant disappointment to his clever, polished lawyer father, who said bluntly, more than once, that he was disappointed how such an uncouth specimen happened to be a son of his. Mrs. Carow hushed her husband at this. She was milder in her judgment. But there was a betraying droop to her handsome mouth sometimes when she looked at the sullen silent Chad. She knew that neighbors would be friendly and indulgent, but she commiserated her son and her husband. For the boy resembled neither his big courteous father nor his sweet and cultured mother.

After dinner, when Chad had flung on a cap and gone out to meet the gang," Judge Holton had tactfully talked of other things—his long dead friend, John Carow's prosperity, Mrs. Carow's charming furniture and a certain railroad case just then occupying the center of the front page. It was, in fact, this case that had brought the judge to town.

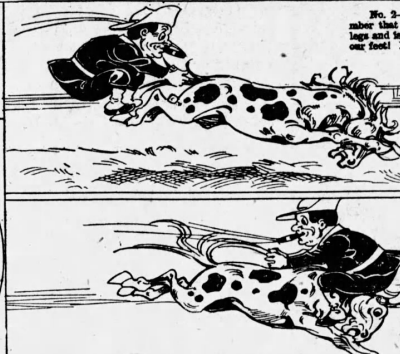

"And, by George, your father ought to be alive to handle it," he sighed. "He was the one who knew how to go home, as work was difficult. Moreover, he did not fancy letting people see him in that disfigured state. So he dictated a few letters to his stenographer and then went home.

The house was quiet and seemed empty. Mrs. Carow was not at home. He went into his den and began to read up on a matter that he had been putting off till leisure arrived. And he was absorbed in this reading when the front door opened and a friend slipped in, slipped into the living room. Recitations were over at high school and they came in to fling their books down before going to a ball game.

"I ought to study," said Chad sullenly.

ly. "Aw, what's the diff?" demanded his friend.

"Not much," said Chad. "Sometimes I think I got a brick for a head."

"So've I," said his friend, with a cheerful snicker. "I don't care. Why should you?"

It was then that John Carow got a new sidelight on his son. For Chad sighed a long, wearisome "Well, I care," shortly. "It's different with you. Your father's just—just—"

"Well!" peevishly. "He isn't a legal light, but, let me tell you, he's a darned good butcher!" Plainly offense had been Chad apologized. John Carow, listening amusedly, had not known that his son could apologize so deftly, so placatingly, so nicely.

"But, you see, Bill," he added pertinently, "my father is a notch higher than I can ever hope to be. And I—well, I know I'm an awful disappointment to him," sadly. "Gosh, not long ago there was a judge here for dinner and I got so rattled I swallowed two bites of meat when I intended to take only one. Then I choked—Oh, my!" In retrospect, perhaps disquiet, "I certainly had some show of magic."

"Aw, come on," rattled Bill. "So the game'll be over while we stand here chewing the rag."

So they went out, their heavy heels ringing hard on the polished floor. John Carow forgot that he was reading. There was a curiously soft light in his clever eyes.

Presently Chad's mother came home. "The judge telephoned that he will be here tonight," she said hastily. "He's leaving town tomorrow morning, and I knew we wouldn't mind advancing the date of the dinner. Has Chad come yet?" Her tone was worried. "I want to talk

John Carow put a mark in the book that he was reading. "Chad was his but he has gone out. But I—I would say anything to him. It might embarrass him."

Mrs. Carow paused on the stairs. "Don't be sarcastic, John," she begged. She hurried off to change her gown and feed the maid, and her husband had time to explain.

And after dinner he was saved expiation, and he got another sidelight on his son, who had eaten dinner in the usual sullen, silent style and departed immediately afterward.

laughed. "By George, that boy does remind me of your father at his age, John. Just such a lout your father was; awkward and tongue-tied. No one would have believed he would amount to a row of pins, and how he did develop afterwards! And he sighed for the old friendship. You say you're going to make him a lawyer?"

Mrs. Carow turned an apprehensive glance toward her husband. Yet in this apprehension there was a certain relief caused by the judge's words. And this relief was heightened. For John Carow said heartily: "You bet he'll be a lawyer."

LOST SUBMARINE RAISED AFTER MONTHS OF WORK

Cause of Disaster to F-4 Will Be Known When Craft Is Dry Docked

HONOLULU, T. H., Aug. 30.—Work preliminary to the dry docking of the submarine F-4, lost in the Honolulu harbor with twenty-two men March 4, and raised yesterday, was under way today. It was expected the craft would be placed in dry dock tomorrow. Until then nothing definite can be announced as to what caused the disaster.

The F-4 was raised by the pontoon method, six special pontoons, each with lifting capacity of sixty tons, having been constructed at the Mare Island, Cal., navy yard for the purpose, after all other methods proved unavailing.

The submarine F-4, commanded by Lieutenant Alfred L. Ede, and with a crew of twenty-one men, went to the bottom of the harbor of Honolulu March 24, 1915, during maneuvers of the F-4 squadron. She was located two days later and Diver John Agra, of the navy, descended 215 feet, establishing a new world record, in an effort to facilitate the work of bringing her to the surface. Her crew, it was said, might have been alive at that time, but attempts at rescue failed, and on March 31, Rear Admiral C. T. Moore, commanding the Honolulu station, reported that the F-4 lay in 270 feet of water and would have to be raised by pontoons.

Secretary Daniels announced that what would be raised at any cost to determine the cause of the accident and remove the wreckage and divers were sent leaving San Francisco Sunday 6 on the cruiser Maryland. One of the divers, Frank Crilly, went down 225 feet and found one of the compartments of the F-4 filled with water. Another, William Longman, descended 220 feet the first day and was seriously injured by water pressure. These men put lines on the F-4 by which the boat was drawn slowly up the shelling bottom, but in the process the stern was wrecked and work was halted until the arrival of pontoons. Six of these, capable of lifting sixty tons each, were sent from Mare Island navy yard early in August on the Maryland.

At the time of the accident reports were circulated that the F-4 was not in good shape when she went below water. These were officially denied.

EAGLES GIVE AID TO BROTHERS IN GALVESTON

William L. Grayson, of Savannah, recently elected grand worthy president of the Order of Eagles at the meeting of the grand Erie in Spokane, Washington, arrived in Atlanta Saturday, bringing the report that conditions in Galveston, Texas, are worse as the result of the food than is generally realized. Mr. Grayson, on his arrival here, received telegrams from members of the order of Eagles at the convention stating that the plight of some of the members of the order was pitiful, as their homes had been swept away and many were living in box cars.

Mr. Grayson immediately appointed W. T. Seater, of San Antonio, as his local deputy, and instructed him to go to Galveston to the relief of the Eagles there, authorizing the expenditure of $1,000 of the grand lodge's funds for the work.

Former Atlanta Telegraph Wins Championship

(By Associated Press.)
SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 30.—The Carnegie diamond medal, representing the all-around telegraphic championship, was awarded today to T. S. Brichouse, of San Francisco, and to J. E. Barton, of the Associated Press. The championship contest, the feature of the telegraphers' tournament in connection with the Panama-Pacific exposition, began Saturday. H. C. Emrich, of San Francisco, was second.

The championship test included the sending of twenty commercial messages, ten railroad messages, 500 words of press matter and a stipulated amount of brokerage matter and the receiving of the same amount of railroad, commercial and brokerage matter and 1,000 words of press copy. Brichouse's time was 33 minutes, 49.5 seconds, and Barton's 35 minutes, 49.5 seconds.

Brichouse also took first honor in the commercial test for sending sixty messages. H. E. Bartlett, of the Associated Press, San Francisco, was the sixty messages in the receiving test, taking 25 minutes, 12 seconds, 13 seconds, a new world's record. In sending the messages in this contest, Brichouse also established a new world's record. The tournament was open to the world.

T. S. Brichouse, better known as "T. S. Brichouse," is well known as a telegrapher, who worked several years ago with the Associated Press. At that time Brichouse was noted as one of the speediest operators in the country. When the "sending machines" came into use, Brichouse was one of the few men who could shoot more words over the wire by "hand sending" than by the machines.

Brichouse has many friends in Atlanta, especially among A. P. operators and newspaper men, and he was delighted to hear of his success at San Francisco.

The Sofa of a Life Time

Tapestry Upholstered, at $56.00

Having bought such a sofa as this, one may rest (we use the word advisedly) in comfort that one has selected a piece of furniture that will last and be enjoyed for years and years. That it is priced at $56 is because this maker, from whom we buy our very finest upholstered furniture, has made a specialty of it. But giving the specifications tells that only the most successful specialization could produce such a sofa at $56.

It is what is called the over-stuffed English Sofa, 6 feet 8 inches long; the springs of the seat come to the very edge, and the seat is 22 inches wide; also there are springs in the back; upholstered in a rich mulberry, blue and green tapestry.

If one has planned to own a real, "comfy," good-looking sofa for last for "all time," here it is—one's plans may be realized, and we warrant at a smaller cost than was thought possible.

N. B.—We have chairs and rockers upholstered to match this sofa.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 30.—Little Rock won a double-header from New Orleans yesterday, the scores of both games having been 5 to 3. Errors by the locals and their inability to hit with runners on bases cost them both contests.

It was Bob Higgins day, and the Pelican catcher was presented with a chest of silver, purchased with a Tund donated by the city.

MOBILE, Ala., Aug. 30.—Mobile hit two Chatham, Fla. pitchers for fifteen hits and won easily today, 8 to 2. Covington, though wild, pitched good ball with the exception of a triple play, on a ground ball, hit to Petty, who, though he tagged the runner coming from second, threw to Flick for the second out. Flick caught the ball and threw to Petty for the feature. Field events followed the game. Miller, Mobile and Cunningham, Chatham, won the 100-foot race and Burke, Mobile, the 200-foot race in a running contest with a throw of 359 feet.

Permit for $10,000 Business Building on Marietta Street

Boosts August Value to Figure Close to Last August's. R. M. Faddox Razes Peachtree Home Preparatory to Business Improvement—Warehouse Deed Is Recorded

With the issuance Monday of a $10,000 building permit for a brick business building on Marietta street, the August value was brought close to $248,000, or a little over $4,000 under the August value of 1914.

It is believed that the difference will be made up and the last August figures passed during Monday and Tuesday. Ninety-five thousand dollars worth of applications on file will be issued either Monday or Tuesday.

Some of the Candler warehouse permits will be issued in September, and from now on building will show a pronounced increase. The value for the year is still about $700,000 behind, but this deficit will probably be considerably reduced if not wiped out.

MADDOX RESIDENCE RAZED

The former home of R. F. Maddox at Peachtree and Ellis streets, across from the old Capital City club site, is being razed. Guide & Co., the contractors, began tearing down the house Monday.

The lot is 55x150, and Mr. Maddox said Monday that he hadn't decided definitely what sort of improvement he would make on it, but would decide on his return from the bankers' convention in Seattle.

He thought, however, that he would erect stores on the corner. The improvement is significant as marking the passing of another residence landmark on close Peachtree street.

Commenting on the improvement, Mr. Maddox said that there was a notable improvement in business. The advance in the price of cotton, he said, had put everybody in good spirits.

CANDLER DEEDS

Papers went to record Monday formally conveying from the Anthony Murphy estate to Ana G. Candler the forty-acre site of his company and warehouses on Peachtree street.

Preliminary work has already been done. The deed is a new city school, which cost $40,000. It is said to be the largest school building in the city.

Just across the street from the school is a large and modern apartment building, making a modern center which is the envy of many other sections.

Lots in this subdivision being selling all the time during the dark days of the war. Buyers would come in and lay down $1,000 in hard cash and $20 a month. No mortgage to be paid.

The best streets in our subdivision at present are Peachtree street, Liberty street, Peachtree street, and Peachtree street. We will these lots under reasonable residential restrictions, prohibiting corner stores.

We have sold in all 170 building lots, and 50 houses have been erected. We would like for you to observe the beauty and finish of these homes and their well-kept appearance.

We consider these $1,000 building lots, with all conveniences, as the standard of value in this line. Easy terms are arranged and home building is a pleasure.
